PARAGRAPHS DEVELOPMENT

With development of globalisation, communications with other people from foreign countries by using of an international language such as English are urgent. By conducting the communications either verbally or writtenly, many activities have been established. As face-to-face contacts are frequently difficult to be done, written communications are another form of contacts, which is cheap for everyone. Hence, transferring written messages amongst foreign people are maintained as an effective way to communicate each other. Moreover, in the era of advanced technology, many results of the research and development studies have been written down and published in English so that many people in many countries will know about these developments. These facts become the main reason to prepare this book.

This book describes skills to be used to develop paragraphs for students of Chemical Engineering. It summarises the skills needed to organise from one paragraph to one essay from many sources. How to analyse the questions, how to break down the answers, how to refine the sentences, how to develop the controlling idea and its paragraph, etc. are discussed. How to write paragraph(s) for process description and how to compose the statistical information paragraph(s) are also explained mainly based-on the statement(s) question(s).
