Technology and minority language: An Android-based dictionary development for Lampung language maintenance in Indonesia

Tapuya: Latin American Science, Technology and Society

Dear Dr Ariyani,

Thank you for submitting your manuscript "Technology and minority language: An Android-based dictionary development for Lampung language maintenance in Indonesia". We have now received the reviews (below). Reviewers have pointed out some concerns, but they also agree that the work is very interesting and promising. Revisions are suggested to make the article publishable. If you would be willing to work on these modifications, we will be very excited to publish your paper.

In the reviews (below) you will find insightful comments that need your attention. In particular, I would recommend to focus on:

- (1) framing the article around how technology can contribute to language attitudes as a crucial factor in language maintenance and not on language documentation;
- (2) explaining more in detail the methodology and technical aspects of your research (e.g. the kind of primary documents, metadata, participants, criteria for choosing participants, etc.). Similarly, it would be helpful to state clearly the main problem(s) to be addressed and, if possible, the main research questions/objectives.
- (3) broadening and expanding the literature review, including more on language maintenance, the relationship between positive attitudes and language maintenance, the power relations between state institutions and population to make these tools possible, and the skills, interests, and attitudes of speakers to use the tool. Since some concepts from the literature review are crucial for your research, you need to develop them further in order to have a proper theoretical framework in the article. Reviewers have suggested literature that might be of interest for you.

When submitting the new version, it will be essential that you attach a letter detailing the changes made in response to each and every one of the reviewers' comments. In those cases in which you decide not to address some of them, we ask you to expressly indicate why you have made this decision.

We have set the deadline for submission by Dec 01, 2021. However, if you need more time to work on the manuscript, please let us know and we'll change the deadline accordingly.

In accordance with our format-free submission policy, an editable version of the article must be supplied at the revision stage. Please submit your revised manuscript files in an editable file format.

To submit a revision, go to <https://www.editorialmanager.com/ttap/> and log in as an Author. You will see a menu item called 'Submission Needing Revision'. You will find your submission record there.

We are truly excited to publish your work and we hope you are willing to submit these revisions.

Kind regards,

Leandro Rodriguez Medina, PhD

Editor-in-Chief

Reviewers' comments:

Reviewer #1: Introduction - Too lengthy. The first and the second statements in the first paragraph are poorly linked.

References - outdated citations are used throughout the manuscript. XXX - is not a reference. It has been overly used.

Citations - E.g: Levang & Prayoga, 2003 as cited in Katubi, 2006

Why is this format of citation overly used throughout the article? The actual idea came from the primary source. Why is there a need to cite someone who is just restating the idea of the author in the primary source?

E.g: Refer to Page 8- Wikipedia, 2020 - Provide a valid reference. Wikipedia is not accepted as a reference as the information can easily be manipulated as they are taken from other primary and secondary sources. Remove this and insert a valid reference to support.

Evidences - Refer to Page 7. To start the statement with this phrase (Although a considerable amount of research on Lampung language has been studied,) , there should have been some insights on the kind of research carried out on Lampung language in the preceding paragraphs.

Theories & theoretical framework - No theories are incorporated. No theoretical framework is found.

THE STUDY - Statement of problem needs to be explained under this section and state the research gap and research questions / objectives.

Methodology - Participants - How many of them took part in each phase? What were the criteria set for the selection of participants? Readers have to search for the information.

Research design - The content included under THE STUDY (about DDR) can be summarised and inserted under Research Design.

Tables - The information included in Table 2 can also be found in Table 3. Why two tables with the same information. Use one table instead to avoid redundancy.

Implication of the study - is missing

Cohesion - Ideas in paragraphs need re-ordering and some of the sentences need to be restructured.

Reviewer #3: This article examines the role of technology in dictionary development for minority languages. The case study presented here is of the Lampung language. The Author(s) states that the aim of the study is "to electronically document Lampung language through the development of an Android-based bilingual dictionary application for smartphones".

The article is relevant to a public of engineers who develop language technology and promoters of language revitalization initiatives. The development of applications and other products of language technology is an important issue in current discussions about the role of digital technologies in minority language maintenance.

Suggestions for revisions.

The major area of revision that I suggest is about the claim that the application has successfully documented the Lampung language (in abstract and conclusions). The making of a dictionary can scarcely be called a documentation as such. Rather, a dictionary is a product that adds to the documentation process of a language. Perhaps this is an issue of word choice, but if the aim of the article is to describe how the application has contributed to Lampung language documentation then the author has to situate this current work in the literature of language documentation. Language documentation as a sub-field of linguistics deals with the creation of a comprehensive, multi-purpose record of a language that include annotation, translation, preservation and distribution of the resulting materials (Austin, 2010; Furbee, 2010; Gippert, Himmelmann, & Mosel, 2006; Woodbury, 2011). It is intended to create a corpus representing the range of ways language is used within a community. In the article, no information is given about the current status of Lampung language documentation. Also, we do not know how the primary documents (such as audio and video recordings) were gathered nor which types of metadata were used. This means we cannot assess whether the project was designed as a language documentation project (it could easily be a part of descriptive linguistics) nor how it contributes to Lampung language documentation.

Rather, I think the article wants to describe how technology can contribute to language maintenance and preservation. At the conclusion of the paper, we see less evidence of "documentation" than we do of positive language attitude. My suggestion is to focus the article on how technology can contribute to more positive language attitudes as a crucial factor in language maintenance and not on language documentation. This change of focus will help center the discussion and support this discussion with data that are available from interviews that were part of the project.

That said, I consider that the claim for the application to be "practical solution" for Lampung language maintenance (in the data collection and analysis section) is not supported. In fact, no application in itself can bear a claim of language maintenance and there is no need to do so. The fact that the application contributes to language maintenance can be sustained through the positive comments of the users.

The second area of revision involves the discussion and conclusion sections. In my view, the discussion is somewhat circular and rather short. The author states the same as in the beginning of the article: Lampung language maintenance through technical inclusion is underexplored (this is not a result or discussion but the starting point of the project), and mobile applications have mushroomed (also a starting point). Perhaps additional literature review can strengthen the discussion about the relationship between positive attitudes and language maintenance with more convincing arguments. Positive attitudes are part of language ideologies, and can be related to themes of ethnic identity. There is a discussion about how language attitudes may influence language shift. For example, Eisenlohr's article that is cited in the article stresses the importance of the ideological dimensions through which the use of digital mediation is perceived, insisting that not only the instrumental-technical possibilities but also the sociocultural interpretation of these practices are crucial in the analysis of the significance of computer technology for minority language activism. One also has to look into the power relation between state institutions and populations to make the development of these tools possible, as well as the skills, interests and attitudes of the speakers to use the tools once these are available. I think that type of conclusion would make clear the impact your work has on a broader conversation.

Further comments:

1. The description of the Lampung language and the use of technology among its speakers is appropriate and sufficiently supported by literature references, yet no information is given about the state of documentation of the language. Again, the stress is on the topic of language maintenance.
2. The description of the study is sufficient, but lacks a fundamental element: the description of the contents of the dictionary itself. I guess a glossary, vocabulary or bilingual dictionary already existed and that the project entailed the adaptation of this source to a digital environment? Who made this reference work, how was it compiled, what information does it provide? This information is important and should be included in this section.
3. The description of the methods is sufficiently justified.
4. Eisenlohr (2004) does not claim that a language can be "electronically stored, documented, preserved and maintained"; he speaks of electronic mediation in language revitalization processes. Again, this might be an issue of an unclear sentence, but the idea of language documentation is not that storage equals preservation and maintenance. Language documentation can be coupled to language maintenance and revitalization, and this usually includes activities in the language community that allow a more equal participation on the side of the speakers in the whole process (Fenyvesi, 2014; Flores Farfán & Ramallo, 2010; Rehg, 2007).

The English writing is good. A few minor errors, for example, in the abstract it says that "the application has successfully document[ed] Lampung language".

Dear Farida, I hope this email finds you well. I'm writing because we have received the initial proofs of your manuscript. The process we follow in Tapuya is that you and one of our editors revise the document. I am attaching here the PDF - Luis Reyes (of our editorial team) has already revised it and made some minor changes (please let me know if you are ok with these). Also, please make any corrections you deem necessary, and answer the queries that T&F sent and that appear in the first pages of the proofs. You can use Adobe Reader to make the changes directly in the PDF, or you can send me a word document noting line number and the change you wish to make (for example; line 54 - the change).

When you are happy with the changes, I will upload them to the system. T&F will apply the changes and they will send us a second round of proofs for a final revision before publication.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me. I will be happy to help.

Abrazos
Luisa

Dear Luisa,

We hope this email finds you well. We apologise for the delay in providing this response.

We would like to inform you that the initial proofreading of our manuscript has been completed. We responded to the comments in the PDF and are all in agreement with the minor changes you made. The revised manuscript is attached.

One of the comments requests a 300-dpi image (Figure 1), which is attached.

For your information, one of our co-authors (As. Rakhmad Idris) recently relocated to the Indonesian National Research and Innovation Agency. Could we please request that you change his affiliation on the manuscript's title page?

Kindly notify us if we can be of further assistance.

With kind regards,
Farida

Dear Farida, thank you so much for the revision and the image you sent. I just need you to send me the other two images with better resolution. In T&F's query they ask for images 1, 2 and 3, can you provide these?

Also, the journal cannot change the affiliation of the author you mentioned because they request the affiliation of authors when the article was written. Is this ok?

Hi Luisa,

Please accept our apologies for only attaching Figure 1 in our previous email. Attached are 400-dpi images for Figure 2 and Figure 3.

That is okay, Luisa. We adhere to the journal's policy. As a result, we'll need to update his brief biography. We wrote in the PDF's comment section: "As. Rakhmad Idris is a researcher at the National Research and Innovation Agency, Indonesia. In 2017, he earned a doctorate from the University of Indonesia. His scholarly interests are primarily in ancient texts and literature. Additionally, he is engaged in the inventory of religious manuscripts in Indonesia. He would be quite grateful to receive an email from you at asrakhmad@gmail.com." This brief biography must be changed to "As. Rakhmad Idris is a researcher of the Lampung Provincial Language Office, the Agency for Language Development and Cultivation of the Ministry of Education, Culture, Research, and Technology, Indonesia. In 2017, he earned a doctorate from the University of Indonesia. His scholarly interests are primarily in ancient texts and literature. Additionally, he is engaged in the inventory of religious manuscripts in Indonesia. He would be quite grateful to receive an email from you at asrakhmad@gmail.com."

If any additional revisions are required, please let us know.

With kind regards,
Farida

Dear Farida, I hope you are doing well. I'm writing because we just got your final proofs in. As we did last time, Luis Reyes, from our editorial team, has revised the PDF and has made some minor changes - please let me know if you are ok with these. Also, please, revise the document and make the changes you deem necessary.

You will note that the queries continue to appear on the first pages of the PDF. Please don't worry, T&F leaves them there so you can check that the changes were made correctly.

This is the last time we have to make corrections so the names of the authors, affiliations, email addresses and other relevant information have to be correct.

When you are happy with the changes, I will upload them to the system so that T&F can apply them and then publish the article.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Abrazos
Luisa

Hi Luisa,

We hope you are doing well, too. Thank you.

We had a careful look at the most recent PDF. It looks great now and the names of the authors, affiliations, email addresses are correct. We are also okay with the minor changes you made, thank you.

However, we found a few to focus on for consideration (attached) as follows:

1. Do we need to delete the word 'linguistics' here that the sentence becomes "Finally, Lampung traditional elders and evaluators with backgrounds in linguistics (Lampung, Indonesian, and English), culture, and information and technology were invited to assess the application's content, design, and functionality"? (yellow highlight, p. 7, sub-heading 3.1, line 13)
2. '50 Lampung native speakers' revised to '40 Lampung native speakers' (p. 7, sub-heading 3.1, line 14)
3. Table 2 should be listed first, followed by Table 3, right? (yellow highlight, p. 7)
4. Table 2 should be listed first, followed by Table 3, right? (yellow highlight, p. 8)
5. 'Table 5' above should be 'Table 5 below', right? (yellow highlight, p. 10)
6. By the way, we found Table 5 is under the Discussion sub-heading (p.12), while the explanation for Table 5 is under the Results sub-heading (p.10). Is that okay? If you think it is okay, it is just fine for us.

If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to let us know.

With kind regards,
Farida

Dear Farida, thank you for your careful revision. Everything looks fine, and I have uploaded the corrections to T&F. In reference to your last question about Table 5, I have asked our typesetters to move it to the area where it is being discussed. I will ask our production team to send us the article with the corrections before they publish it, just to check they moved the table correctly.

Fear Farida, I hope you are doing well. I'm writing because your article is about to be published and we want to make sure the change in the location of the images is correct according to what you requested (attached you can find the article as it will appear online). In case there is something you want to change, please let me know. If you do not want to change anything, please let me know as soon as possible so we can publish the article immediately.

Abrazos
Luisa

Hi Luisa,

I am doing well, thank you. I hope the same for you.
After careful reading, I found that the manuscript is now camera-ready that no further change is needed.

Once again, thank you very much and I really am looking forward to reading it online.

With best regards,
Farida

Dear Farida Ariyani,

Your Open Access article, Technology and minority language: an Android-based dictionary development for the Lampung language maintenance in Indonesia, published in Tapuya: Latin American Science, Technology and Society, Volume 5 Issue 1, is now available to access via tandfonline.com.

Share your article now

You'll hopefully want to share your article with friends or colleagues (and then check its downloads, citations and Altmetric data on AuthorWorks, our dedicated center for all Routledge published authors). Publishing Open Access means your article can be read by anyone, anywhere, and we want to work with you to ensure it reaches as wide (and as appropriate) an audience as possible.

Author feedback tells us that something as simple as posting about your article's publication on social media is a highly effective way of highlighting your research. Find out more about how you can work with us to promote your work.

Not sure how to access your AuthorWorks?

If you haven't yet registered, you can do so using farida.ariyani@fkip.unila.ac.id (this is the email you used whilst your manuscript was going through production).

Once you've completed the quick registration you'll be sent an email asking you to confirm. Click on the verification link and you can then login (using the above email address) whenever you want to by going to Taylor & Francis Online. Once you have logged in, click on "Your Account" at the top of the page to see the latest updates on your article.

If you have any problems accessing your Taylor & Francis Online account please contact us. Thank you for publishing Open Access with us.

Kind regards,
