ABSTRACT: The importance of implementing full day school in character building in elementary school students makes the writer interested in making a literature review. Character education is important to be developed and internalized immediately, because it has a noble enough purpose for the provision of students' lives so that they are always ready to respond to all the dynamics of life with full responsibility. The research method used is literature study. The purpose of this literature review is to obtain a theoretical basis that can support problem solving regarding the application of full day school in character building for elementary school students. The results of this research shows that full day school gives positive impact for the children's growth especially on establishing the character values since the early stage started from the elementary school.

KEYWORDS: Character Building, Education, Fullday School.

INTRODUCTION

Education is a necessity that humans absolutely need in everyday life [1]. Education is considered to be a solution in solving all existing problems, both formal and non-formal education, for example formal education such as school [2]. Primary school is one of the educational institutions that prepares superior humans from an early age, because at the age of 6-12 years it is a development of all their potential for children, both emotionally, intellectually, and morally [3]. Primary schools prepare students for the next level, and basic education must make a high contribution to developing basic skills and student talents [4].

In addition, character building efforts are carried out from an early age so that later children can find out which behavior is good and bad so that there is no character value crisis [5]. Character building is carried out by applying Pancasila values in character education, especially including religious values, honesty, tolerance, discipline, hard work, creative, independent, democratic, curiosity, national spirit, love for the country, respect for achievement, communicative, love peace, love reading, care about the environment, care socially, and be responsible [6].

However, one of the problems currently facing the Indonesian nation is the crisis of character values. Crime that is rife in Indonesia is an example that does not reflect the character of the nation [7]. A hope that many parties want for the realization of a generation capable of maintaining the dignity of the Indonesian nation is not in accordance with what is happening today, the behavior of adolescents who are far from social values and norms is increasingly worrying, such as brawls between students [8]. Based on data from the Indonesian Child Protection Commission (KPAI), the number of violences against children in the education sector as of 30 May 2018 was 161 cases, 23 cases of child victims of brawl, 31 cases of child perpetrators of brawl and cases of children victims of violence and bullying 36 cases [9]. According to data from KPAI 2019, the results of monitoring cases of child violations in the education sector increased from January to April [10]. This is due to the absence of teacher control, especially from parents, and due to the large amount of free time after school, and this free time is used for things that are not useful [11].

Full day school comes as one of the best solutions to overcome those problems, improve education quality in Indonesia, and develop students' character [12]. The full day school system is one form of an educational model that is very supportive to develop student character value [13]. Full day schools were established to accommodate various problems that exist in society, which wants their children to get the best education both from academic and non-academic aspects and to provide protection for children from promiscuity [14]. The idea of full day school is very feasible to minimize the negative influence of the home and outside environment [15]. Full day school is a school that in the implementation of learning is carried out for a full day from morning to evening with part of the time spent on lessons with an informal atmosphere, not rigid, fun for students and requires creativity and innovation from the teacher [16]. Schools that implement a full day school, its implementation are very appropriate for the habituation of students so that they can carry out character values in all activities at school under school responsibility and supervision [17]. The role of full-day school can cultivate habits in children and can indirectly shape children's character whether it is about discipline, honesty, leadership to deal with the times that continue to develop. These habituation factors need to be applied to students from an early age, and the habituation of these factors should be done continuously [18].

From the explanation of character formation above, we can understand that character education is important to be developed and internalized immediately, because it has a noble purpose for the life of students so that they are always ready to respond to all the dynamics of life with full responsibility. Full day school will be able to bring students to the formation of personality and character, through habituation when students practice the knowledge they have received while remaining under the supervision of teachers. In other words, all educational stakeholders must be involved in developing character education. However, literature on this topic is under-researched, particularly little known about literature review about the topic in the Indonesian context. Therefore, it is necessary to carry literature review about "How is the implementation of full day school in elementary schools in forming student character?"

LITERATUR REVIEW

Student Character

According to the Big Indonesian Dictionary (KBBI) character is a character; psychological, moral or character traits that distinguish one person from another. Character person is a person who has personality, behavior, character, or character. There are five important values in strengthening the character that is originally from the Pancasila, since Pancasila is a prior to strengthen the movement on the character education [20]. Character-forming values are religious, honest, disciplined, hard work, creative, independent, democratic, curiosity, national spirit, love for the homeland, respect for achievement, friendly/communicative, love peace, love to read, care for the environment, care about social, and responsibility [21].

Full Day School

A research claims that students will get many benefits academically and socially by the existing of full-day school [23]. Full day school is able to apply the habituation to be a provision for the students' in their life [24]. Full day school is considered as one way that can be applied in the field of education to fix moral problems and children's character [25]. Full Day School, aims to foster morals and form good character in students, not only providing knowledge but also accompanied by character building so that students are accustomed to doing good behaviors in everyday life [26]. Full day school is a school that is designed in such a way as a formal school, also designed to provide certain expectations for parents of students. For example, plus values that have not been given during formal lessons, include group study exercises, congregational practice of obligatory prayer, practice of reading prayers together and others [27].

16 ANALYSIS, RESULTS AND CONCLUSION

Based on the results of a review of various articles obtained, the results of the analysis show that most of the articles focus on Full Day School and the character of students. Table 1. shows that research related to this topic has been carried out in various educational institutions in Indonesia. The rationale of this article is to find out the implementation of full day school in character building in elementary school students. 44

The fading of moral values such as lies and the loss of a sense of responsibility, the fading sense of solidarity, and the thinness of the sense of humanity have occurred in Indonesia. The declining character of students such as increasing violence among teenagers, worsening use of language and words in social interactions, waning respect for older people, need further handling in order to create a better generation in the future. Full day school is one solution to overcome educational problems both in academic ability to learn and in moral rights. This is explained by Triwana et al (2018) that the full day school program is an educational solution for students through the active involvement of students in the classroom and the learning process is democratic and fun. The development of this system is a solution for students to avoid negative behavior. 35

Another finding in this study relates to full day school. The results of research by Fajriati (2019) indicate that the method of continuous habituation in the long term applied to children can instill character so that morals and morals can be formed because children are still in the process of imitation. Sarima et al (2020) stated that with the implementation of full day school, the most prominent characters in students are religious, independent and caring for the environment, disciplined, honest and responsible characters. The research of Irmawanty et al (2018) shows that the goals of character education are achieved as expected; required an institution that is considered capable of implementing it effectively. One of the institutions that are considered effective in the implementation of character education is the school. 32

The reviews in this literature review have limitations including the articles that are reviewed predominantly from the Indonesian state so that other studies are not reviewed due to limitations, dissertations and theses are excluded in this article and the scope of the articles reviewed is still very limited.

Apart from the limitations of the literature, the findings in this literature review are expected to contribute to the implementation of full day school in character building for elementary students. Based on the findings, it can be concluded that in order to be able to develop children's character from an early age, an institution that is considered effective in implementing character education is needed. The program that can be applied is full day school because it is able to have a positive influence on children's development, especially in instilling character values because it is supported by various activities and a pleasant, family and independent school environment so that students do not feel bored and children's play time remains constant. supervised by the teacher. 1
