Journal of Pure and Applied Microbiology

Dear Dr. Inawan,

Greetings from "Journal of Pure and Applied Microbiology" (JPAM).
Print ISSN: 0973-7510, Online ISSN: 2581-890X, indexed in Emerging Sources Citation Index (Clarivate Analytics), Scopus (Elsevier), UGC-CARS (UGC, India) etc.

This is to inform you that your article is published in Volume 13, Issue 2, June 2019. Kindly find the link below to download your article. Also, please go through the Table of Contents (TOC) of previously published issues attached with this mail, you might find some interesting articles related to your work.

<https://www.journalofpureandappliedmicrobiology.com/contents.html>

We would like to share with you some important points on how to increase Citation of your article, as it is a key factor in making your research count and increasing your author H-index. Please do share this with all your Co-authors who have published articles in JPAM and ask them to share their published research as much possible, this will help both of us in making our published work widely discoverable.

Citation count: If you are a researcher, you know the importance of this number. Number of times an academic paper is cited has become a major measure of its research impact. Increasing your Citation count can also have a positive impact on your career because funding agencies often look at a combination of the number of papers and the number of citations when making grant decisions.

Write a review article with a hot topic related to your field or specialization including the most recent information's, this will greatly improve your citation.

To boost your citation count to maximize impact, consider these simple techniques.

1. Cite your past work when it is relevant to a new article. However, do not reference every paper you have written just to increase your citation count.
2. Share your data. There is evidence that sharing your data can increase your citations. Consider posting to data sharing websites, such as Figshare or SlideShare, or contributing to Wikipedia and providing links to your published manuscripts.
